

Living or Vegetated Walls

Vegetated walls can be cement block landscape retaining walls with panted, soil filled cavities between the blocks, plastic soil holding modules attached to exterior building walls, or even interior building walls. When these areas are planted, they enhance aesthetics, improve air quality, provide insulation, dampen noise and reduce impervious materials and runoff. They can be planted with ground covers, perennials, vines, herbs, and even garden plants such strawberries, melons and squash.

